

Emily Caskey completed her Master's degree in German Literature at the University of Georgia, where she taught introductory German language courses. As an undergraduate German and History major she studied abroad in Rostock, Germany through a UGA exchange program. In addition to her academic year abroad, she interned in Berlin at the U.S. Embassy and taught German to international students at the Humboldt University of Berlin. Emily's passion for international education comes from her love of working with students and her enthusiasm for academic and cultural exchange; in her role as a Study Abroad Advisor at Georgia State she hopes to encourage curiosity and prepare students to benefit personally, academically, and professionally from study abroad.
